(e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

4. Claims 30, 32 – 35, 37, 40, 41 and 44 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Kemp et al. US 2003/0200289 A1.

an acquisition step of acquiring printer information on a plurality of printers provided in a network [0006];

a selecting step of selecting one of the plurality of printers on which the printer information is acquired in the acquisition step[0028] and selecting an extended function program of a core printer driver, the extended function program being allowed to be used for the selected printer [0044, see ID]; a displaying step of displaying (a) information indicating the extended function program allowed to be used for the printer selected for a designated client apparatus [0044 – 0048] in the selecting step [0030], and (b) an instruction section on which art a remote installation instruction of the selected extended function program can be activated, and a sending step of sending the extended function program to the designated client apparatus in response to activation of the remote installation instruction on the instruction section displayed in the displaying step [0044].

Regarding claims 32 and 37, (Currently Amended) The remote install method according to claim 30, wherein, the extended function program is (a) registered as an object to be supported by an inter-object communication function provided by a operating system of the client apparatus, (b) connected to a driver of a device connected to the client

Regarding claim 33, (Currently Amended) The remote install method according to claim 30, wherein, the sending step sends the extended function program to a designated client apparatus in accordance with designation of a the client and an install start instruction entered via an input unit [0035].

Regarding claim 34, the remote install method according to claim 30, wherein, the sending step sends, to a designated client apparatus, an extended function program, allowed to be installed in a device allowed to be used for the designated client apparatus [0045].

Regarding claim 40, the server apparatus according to claim 35, wherein the sending unit sends the extended function program to a designated client apparatus in accordance with designation of the client apparatus and install starting instruction entered via an input unit [0029].

Regarding claim 41, the server apparatus according to claim 35, wherein the sending unit sends to a designated client apparatus an extended function program allowed to be installed in a device allowed to be used for the designated client apparatus [0043, see extensible].

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 30, 32 – 35, 37, 40, 41 and 44 - 47 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

However, regarding Applicants argument on page 7 of 07/06/09 response that the prior art doesn't show the extended function program. Examiner believes that prior art does. Applicant's plain language of claims merely discloses, "determining an extended function program of a core printer driver, the extended function program being compliant with the selected printer"

As claimed claim merely cause for determining a function of the printer driver being compliant with the selected printer. Examiner believes this is synonymous with must identification processes which take place when selecting a particular printer prior to configuration. Prior art in paragraph

Art Unit: 2192

[0044] discloses this. See "...identification information of the printer to be added (e.g. IP address, the printer's name, a NetBios name, etc.), and the device type of the printer. Having received the printer's identification information and device type, the DDI performs a query (601) of a known database 702 for device configuration information corresponding to the device type.."
